53. Read the poem below and then answer in the sentence the questions that follow.

A day relieved from work has come
Oh! Women's Day
All the year long, a woman works like a donkey
And all the reaps from her hard work
Is non—stop violation
Of her rights.

Rise up now, fellow women!
And say No to harsh treatment
One of which is domestic violence
Tell the entire world.
That both men and women
Have, got equal rights
Today is our day to peak out our minds
Oh! Strong African women
Whose soul was touched
By the good hand of God
We deserve no more suffering
In the hands of ruthless men
Who assume we are weak and powerless?
Natalie Kedra

Last term, the pupils of Primary Six at Chaka Primary School learnt about debating. The teachers explained to the pupils about the rules that must be observed during a debate. They promised to take the pupils to Sobi, the school in the neighbourhood, for a friendly debate. But the teacher told the pupils that they would have a debate at their school before visiting Sobi Primary School.

A week to the closure to the term, the class held a debate. The motion was "Sunlight is more useful than water". This debate was organised by the teachers of English. Mr. Onapita and Miss Anena.

The debate was held in the school main hall and it was between P.6 blue and P.6 yellow. Before the debate commenced, Mr. Onapita read out the rules that were to be followed during the debate. These included; being smart, orderly, articulate, raising points of order and being confident.

As soon as the rules were read, Mupere, the chairperson called the main speakers to take their seats. After that, the National anthem was sung. Mupere invited the first proposer. Other main speakers were also called to give out their points.

Speakers from the audience were later called and finally the secretary was invited to declare the results. He announced that P.6 blue had won the debate.
